

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Ian Inoy is a gender-fluid multidisciplinary artist from the Philippines whose works bring you to a whimsical take on expressions towards humanity and its reflections towards the self and the environment. Ian's unique process of building with mixed media (a marriage between new and junk) allows him to create works of art that encapsulates his experiences, learnings and understanding of the world around him. To him, the process of creating unusual forms, which seemingly creates an illusion of life to non-living things, are his way of trying to allow humanity to be more understanding towards his/her/their own environments. Taking his audiences into a journey of textures that varies in depth, a strong array of vivid colors and unique use of materials, Ian hopes that his works (in all disciplines) act as catalysts for people to be sensitive towards personal and environmental issues. He believes that with the process mentioned, he can not only create new things but also allow him to be able to support great causes towards human advancements as an artist.

ARTIST STATEMENT

Collection, imagination, destruction, and reconstruction is Ian Inoy's process in creating his artworks. Using these methods he is able to create depth and texture all throughout his varying disciplines. Ian Inoy, is also known for his whimsical/dreamy-looking, vividly colored and heavily textured pieces. has dedicated his art journey towards finding ways to manipulate junk and scrap into usable materials. With a few tweaks of destruction and reconstruction of materials, then treating it in order to attain its durability, he then uses these materials in creating new works of art. Venturing towards his motivation, it is catalyzed by his never ending curiosity towards humanity and its connection towards the environment tackling their similar yet dissimilar traits. Questioning their relationship and connection had influenced a huge part of Ian's artistic agendas and concept making. His approach begs for these ideas to influence individuals in juxtapositioning their current situations and settings to their idea of a perfect world as remembrance of nostalgia. With that being said, with Ian's works, worlds and sceneries are created from those memories which are then formed with elements that are playfully placed to carry that childlike appeal. Lastly, Ian Inoy hopes that with this motive and execution, the perfect worlds that were once longed for will eventually be adapted in reality and existence.

IAN INOY

Ian Inoy (b. 1998) is a Filipino performance and visual artist whose body of work -- an intersection between representation and abstraction, takes the audience to an advocacy-based experience. His art promotes the protection and preservation of the environment, especially aquatic life. By the use of recycled plastic and layers of bright colored paint, Ian attempts to recreate the life and harmony he sees in the imagery of a healthy underwater world. The drive to promote this advocacy was catalyzed by one of his breathtaking experiences. He believes that every little effort can impact ocean life protection and it all starts with raising awareness through art forms he loves -- performance and visual art.

ian inoy is a multidisciplinary artist whose body of work takes the audience to an advocacy-based experience. Ian promotes environmental awareness especially the protection of marine and aquatic life through his art. In his works he incorporates junk and scraps which he collects primarily from friends, relatives or straight from him. With the use of such materials, he then creates these into 3-dimensional structures designed as objects. The drive to promote this advocacy was catalyzed by his first diving experiences. He believes that every little effort can impact ocean life protection and it starts with raising awareness.
